

November 24, 2006

Question: Is attack possible?

Answer: No, attack is not possible, because all thought is shared. Each one receives as he has asked to receive through his thought. Therefore, no one is ever attacked, and only his request is answered.

Within perception, attack is a misperception of your experience. It is a misperception of what you believe you are doing and a misperception of that which you experience as being done. It is always misperception and never fact.

I ask you to let go of attack thoughts, not because they are attack, but because they block true perception from your sight. As you believe in attack, you cannot see love, because you believe love is attack. Love is not attack. Love is giving through spirit to spirit that which spirit requests. This giving is never given consciously, as consciousness is the domain of the ego. This giving is natural and outside of the domain of the ego, so that it is without any conscious involvement at all.

Love cannot stop, but love can be misperceived if you believe in attack. In order to see love's reflection through true perception, you must be willing to let go of all perception of attack. Remember this:

When you believe you are attacking or have attacked, you are completely wrong. Give this misperception to Me, that you may see differently.

When you believe you are attacked, you are one hundred percent wrong. Give this misperception to Me, that you may see differently.

When you believe you see one attacking another, you are believing in attack yourself. Give this misperception to Me, that you may see differently.

Miracles are never under conscious control, because giving is never under conscious control. Spirit is not consciousness as the ego is. The ego, or the part of the mind that thinks it is separate, interprets all that is experienced by making up stories about that which is experienced. However, all of that is made up, and so it is the veil that hides true perception from your awareness.

When you do something, you may think, "I am doing this because of this or that." Know that whatever you think after you think "because of" is not true. The only reason you do anything is because you are guided to do it by your thoughts, which come to you from your spirit. All that you do, you do because you are guided to do it. You can never do anything independent of guidance. This is why you are innocent.

Yet, I teach that you have a choice about what you will do and how you will feel, and this is also true. This is true because you get to request through spirit the experiences that shall be given you. You make this request through choosing which thoughts to believe or accept.

If you accept that you are attacking, being attacked or seeing attack, you will have the experience of attack, because you have requested it through your perception. What you ask for is given you, always.

If you see the temptation or the opportunity to perceive attack, but you choose to let that opportunity pass you by by refusing to accept the perception, you request the miracle. The miracle is not really a miracle at all. It is only a truer way of perceiving, which is seeing that there is no attack, because there is only love.

Watch your mind for your perceptions. Ask yourself, "What do I truly want to experience right now?" As you answer this question, you make a conscious decision about how to see. The answer to your request is delivered through spirit, which is not conscious, but it is always exactly that which you honestly requested.