

April 5, 2005

It's time to see what I have been afraid to see. It is time to see that which I am not fully ready to see, but I can open the door a crack. With that little willingness, the Light will come streaming in. I will hear the call of the Blessings outside the door, and I will open it more. As Joy of the call strikes my heart, the door will open wider until at last, the door and the walls I erected around it will fall away and vanish. All that I will see is the Reality I tried to hide.

It is time. Open the door.

~~~~~

Question: A friend has asked for help. He has a sincere desire to bring the Course to others so they may see its truth and value. Is there something you would like to share with him through me? I'd be very happy to pass a message on to him, if this is my role.

Answer: Tell him to shine his light. He has such a beautiful light to share with his flock and everyone. Ask him to focus on that light, to make it bright, so bright that it blazes for all to see. That is the best thing any of my miracle workers can do. They may think they help by answering questions, leading others to study or by passing out food to the hungry or doing other good works. Good works are useful because they are symbols of my love, but it is my love that everyone seeks. My love can shine directly through each of you, regardless of what you are doing, and those who are seeking it now, in this lifetime, will see the light in you and know it is me. Then, they will come to you if you are to be their teacher, and I will tell you what to say to them.

Each miracle worker must focus on developing his own inner light. He can do this through meditation and prayer. Being alone with me is important. I am the inner guide that will show him his role. And it is being alone with me that will make his awareness of the light in him grow; the light does not grow, but the awareness of the light does. And as the miracle worker becomes more aware of the light within, others see it too. Then, the miracle worker may be used to help those who seek to find their own inner light and to fan their own flame.

My guidance comes to each one at the right time for him. It is the right time, because it is the time that he has made ready to hear it. Be at peace with your path and your place within your path. Fan your own flame and listen for my guidance. It is all around you waiting for you to hear.

April 6, 2005

You are beautiful in my sight. Your glory shines up to the heavens and makes the angels sing. There is no one but you and you are everyone. You are our love and our charge whom we care for. Listen to our call. It is for your joy and happiness and peace. Do not turn away from us. Come to us. We are calling you home to Love.

April 7, 2005

It is you. You are the One. Do not be afraid of this message. There is no arrogance in it. It is the Truth of who you Are said plainly, that is all. You are the Answer you seek. You are the One, and there is only One. Accept your Self and all your dreams will come true, because you dream of Truth. Your willingness has laid out a path before you. Follow your path and come home to me, for I am you.

April 9, 2005

My lesson today is lesson #322, I can give up but what was never real.

As I meditated on this lesson, I felt comforted to know that the things of the world that I am giving up are being given up for the Gifts of God. I felt myself trusting this thought. I thanked Spirit for the comfort and asked if there was anything else that He would have me realize from today's lesson. This is what I heard and wrote down:

This includes your self. The "you" that you have thought you are is not you and could never be. That "you" is temporal. You are eternal. The eternal cannot be contained within the temporal. The eternal cannot be limited at all, because that which is eternal is wholly without limits. You are the Holy Unlimited.

Accept your Self. You are drawing closer to this recognition through your willingness. Continue to give me your willingness and you will see that you are me. We are one. We are the same. There is no separation or difference of any kind. Any thought that seems to tell you that you are different from me is a thought of imagination that you made up. Imaginary images are temporary. They are not real.

Return to the recognition of Truth. The Truth awaits to Delight You.