Contemplation of quote:

People feel betrayed by leadership that does not live its own values, even if the people are not ready to live those values themselves. Those of us who willingly step into a leadership role have an increased responsibility to live the values and environment of the movement that is currently guided by consciousness in order to awaken to itself. If we do not have the heart or stamina to be leaders (servant-examples), it is our responsibility to surrender our role (resign). This is love: to lead by following, and if we cannot do that, to resign our leadership role. In this way, we are never an obstacle to consciousness' will and desire to awaken to itself. – Guidance received by Regina at San Damiano
