

From: "Sheryl Howe" <sahowe@wbt.org>
Subject: Nimechoka
Date: Wed, 20 Jun 2007 15:52:04 -0400
To: sahowe@wbt.org

Hello!

Nimechoka --- it's Kiswahili for "I am tired".

Monday, I had some energy. I remember Monday fondly. It's Wednesday and I'm not seeing how I can go for 30 more days.

It seemed possible Monday. In fact, I told people how restful this trip had been. Honestly.

Next weekend, allegedly, there will be a break Friday and Saturday. Pray that works out, or possibly, I inherit some energy some other way...

We've been doing these Bible Clubs for what seems like 200 kids Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. Tomorrow (Thursday) should've been home visits (possibly my favorite activity) except, surprise, it's another Bible Club. There are lots of surprises, which, back in the days when I had energy, were entertaining.

It's just impossible to predict what might happen: "Surprise, you're sharing a song". "Surprise, you thought you were here to observe. No, you're teaching Sunday School"... you just never know...

Also, you could pray for health, rest (we're moving tomorrow --- one of those surprises: "surprise, you need to switch houses for two nights, move back for two weeks, and then back again"), and possibly a better attitude. Back when I had energy, I don't recall being annoyed, being bothered by bland food (and the same-ish bland food every evening) or feeling like I might possibly want to just find a plane and go home (not that I feel this way at this moment, it's just crossed my mind today).

Thanks,
Sheryl